without its thrilling experiences but Chaplain Maguire has had many interesting things happen to him prior to his entry in the Navy.

When the World War broke out Chaplain Maguire was a student at the beautiful old University of Louvain in Belgium. His last year in Belgium was during its occupation by the German army. One adventure after another befell him during those hectic days of history. Among these were several accusations of being an Allied spy.

Included among his various duties was the editorship of the following ship's and station's papers: Maine Foretop, Idaho Yarn, Newport Recruit, 1922, Air Craft Squadrons Zoom, Arklite, Asiatic Four-stacker, Mississippi's Pirate; and the Newport Recruit again in 1935 when the Station was reopened. OUR NAVY Magazine has also published many stories and news articles from his pen.

“Plain Cook” Arouses Polish Army

It is good that we in the Navy are not so sensitive as to how our love affairs are shown on the screen as is the Polish Army. It appears that a moving picture has been shown in Warsaw in which the Polish Army takes a prominent part and a sergeant falls in love and marries a regimental major's cook.

The cause of the near rebellion was the contention of the non-commissioned officers that only an orderly would marry a cook and their criticism became so vociferous that soldiers were forbidden to see the movie.

The General who was instrumental in having the film made apparently was not lacking in a sense of humor as he explained that the trouble was not caused by the fact that a sergeant married a cook but because the woman was such a plain cook.
